Liquorice Day

Friday 12th April 2013

You won't find this holiday on the calendar, but for liquorice lovers throughout the world, April 12th marks an important holiday . . . National Liquorice Day!

At the Curve on 'National Liquorice Day' you will be able to enjoy FREE samples of liquorice candy, liquorice coffee and liquorice spiced tea!

Liquorice is not a recent discovery. The ancient Egyptians used it as a pharmaceutical, and copious supplies were found in King Tut's tomb! Egyptian hieroglyphics record the use of liquorice as a popular beverage among the men of the time.

Modern liquorice candy dates from 17th century Holland. At the time, Holland was one of the world's most powerful countries. Her intrepid sailors spread this wonderful delicacy to other European nations. Today, liquorice candy is manufactured throughout Europe, America, and Australia.
